Part A — Multiple choice (Questions 1–20)

Choose the one best answer for each question.

Chapters 1–2: Service encounter, service package and process design

1. In a service encounter, the "moment of truth" is best described as:
   - A. The time when the guest pays the bill
   - B. The point at which a guest decides whether the organization is reliable, caring, competent, or difficult
   - C. The moment a manager reviews a written complaint
   - D. The first time a guest visits the hotel website
2. Which three participants form the service encounter triad?
   - A. Manager, supplier, and guest
   - B. Front office, back office, and guest
   - C. Service organization, contact employee, and customer
   - D. Guest, competitor, and travel agent
3. A guest complains to the receptionist that the room is not ready. The real cause is an outdated housekeeping update. This shows that:
   - A. A front-stage failure may begin in the back stage
   - B. Receptionists are responsible for room readiness
   - C. Guests usually cause their own delays
   - D. Housekeeping is part of front-stage service
4. According to Chapter 1, a service script should:
   - A. Be followed word for word in every situation
   - B. Replace employee judgment so that every guest is treated identically

- C. Be used only by supervisors and managers
- D. Support employee judgment rather than replace it

5. In the seven-step encounter checklist, what does "Set expectations" require?
   - A. Greeting the guest respectfully
   - B. Giving the guest an honest time estimate
   - C. Documenting requests that continue across departments
   - D. Checking relevant information before the encounter
6. An unsold hotel room tonight cannot be stored and sold tomorrow. Which characteristic of services does this describe?
   - A. Intangibility
   - B. Variability
   - C. Perishability
   - D. Customer participation
7. A fast-food restaurant uses standardized steps for predictable delivery. What is the main risk of this production-line approach?
   - A. Ignoring unusual guest needs
   - B. Too little consistency between orders
   - C. High costs for customizing every order
   - D. Privacy concerns from stored guest data
8. Concierge service, fine dining, and event coordination are best suited to which process design approach?
   - A. Production-line
   - B. Customer-as-coproducer
   - C. Information-empowerment
   - D. Customer-contact
9. In a service blueprint for hotel arrival, "room-status check" and "payment update" belong to which layer?
   - A. Guest action
   - B. Physical evidence
   - C. Invisible employee action
   - D. Failure point
10. A guest makes an error while completing online check-in. According to Chapter 2, the organization should first:
    - A. Charge the guest a correction fee
    - B. Ask whether the process made the correct action easy

- C. Remove the self-service option for all guests
- D. Record the error as the guest's fault

Chapters 3–4: Guest journey, process flow and service quality

11. Which statement best defines a bottleneck?
    - A. Any activity that takes longer than five minutes
    - B. An employee who works more slowly than others
    - C. A step that limits the flow of the whole process
    - D. A decision point in a flowchart
12. Lighting, temperature, sound, smell, and cleanliness belong to which area of the servicescape?
    - A. Ambient conditions
    - B. Spatial layout and function
    - C. Signs and physical evidence
    - D. Supporting goods
13. Which of the following is NOT one of the things a good handoff should state?
    - A. What is needed
    - B. Who owns the action
    - C. When it is expected
    - D. Who caused the problem
14. In a process flowchart, why are the actions of different departments placed in separate rows or lanes?
    - A. To make ownership visible
    - B. To hide waiting points from guests
    - C. To reduce the number of decision points
    - D. To identify which employee is to blame
15. During a walk-through audit, you notice employees using a workaround. What does Chapter 3 advise?
    - A. Stop the workaround immediately
    - B. Ask employees why it exists, since it may reveal a missing resource or badly designed rule
    - C. Ignore it, because audits only follow guests
    - D. Report the employees to human resources
16. Service quality is best explained as a comparison between:
    - A. Price and operating cost

- B. Written standards and procedures
- C. Guest expectations and guest perceptions
- D. Complaints and compliments

17. A manager says "the procedure was followed," but guests still report poor quality. This most likely reflects:
    - A. A quality gap between expected and perceived service
    - B. A bottleneck in the kitchen
    - C. A failure of guests to participate correctly
    - D. A perfectly designed service standard
18. Which walk-through audit note is the most useful?
    - A. "Service felt slow."
    - B. "Staff seemed unfriendly."
    - C. "The lobby looked nice."
    - D. "Guest waited 12 minutes without an update."
19. A hotel standard says, "Resolve all requests in 15 minutes." Staff begin rushing safety checks and giving wrong directions. What is the main problem with the standard?
    - A. Fifteen minutes is too long
    - B. It does not balance speed with accuracy, safety, and completion
    - C. It has too many owners
    - D. It is too easy to observe
20. How should a manager use a low score on a five-item quality scorecard?
    - A. As evidence to discipline the employee
    - B. Ignore it unless it appears three times
    - C. As a learning tool, asking whether the standard was clear and the process supported it
    - D. Remove that question from the scorecard
